death.

JURY HARD TO GET.

bridges have been wrecked. There is widespread damage to property and five or six lives are known to be lost.

ONLY A FAKE.

NO MAN HYPNOTIZED OVER
THE LONG DISTANCE
TELEPHONE.

The story going the rounds of the press about a man in Paducah named Edward Williamson having been hypnotized over the long distance telephone by Dr. Laura Belle Coleman, a woman in Chicago, is a fake pure and simple. Something of the kind was attempted here about three weeks ago, but none of the doctors could be induced to take any stock in it and it was with difficulty that one doctor could be persuaded to go to the place where the "hypnotism" was to take place. He says the whole proceeding was a fake. The Dr. Cook mentioned is the doctor's office boy and the Dr.
Young a young man studying medicine under Dr. Frank Boyd. (No hat pin was stuck through the subject's arm, but through his coat sleeve.)

FORMER PADUCAHAN

MR. CHARLES J. MORTON DIES
AT IRONTON, OHIO.

He Lived In Paducah For Many Years—
Recently Retired From Business.

From Tuesday's Daily.

Mr. Charles J. Morton, formerly a citizen of Paducah, and in business at Fourth and Broadway, died yesterday at his home at Ironton, Ohio, from heart trouble, after an illness of several months. The news of his death was received by relatives in the city last night.

Mr. Morton was at one time one of Paducah's best known and most popular merchants, but some years ago
sold out his business to L. E. Ogilvie & Co. and went to South Pittsburg and to Nashville, where he was in the furniture and carpet business. He lived subsequently at Auburn, Ky., where he last summer retired from business and later went to his wife's former home to reside.
His health had been failing for some time and death was not unexpected.

The deceased was 61 years old and was born in Logan county, Ky. For many years he was a citizen of Paducah, having come here when a boy, and serving in the Confederate regiment from here. He was as a gentleman of wide popularity and deep integrity, and the news of his death will be received here with general regret among those who knew him.

He leaves a wife and two children.
The funeral will take place at Ironton.

official number of paid admissions was 24,483. Mr. J. Crit Jones was second, guessing 24,500, and Mr. E.

THE BUDGET

Tonight the Tax Levy Ordinance
Will be Given First Passage.

RATE, $1.45 ON THE $100

This Year There Will be Increases in Several of the Appropriations for Maintaining the City.

COUNCIL MEETS IN CALLED SESSION

From Wednesday's Sun.

The tax levy ordinance will come up this evening at a called meeting of the city council for first passage. Mayor Lang, who has just returned after a week's absence, is today drawing up the ordinance.

The amount necessary to run the city during the next fiscal year, approximated, is $112,000, about the same as last year. The schools will require a levy of forty-five cents, leaving one dollar for city purposes. There have been increases in many of the appropriations and the fact that the total amount required is practically the same as last year, is due to the fact that last year $18,000 was appropriated for storm water sewerage and brick streets, and this year no such appropriation is made.

The budget will be about as follows, only the larger amounts being given.

Fire department about $30,000, including $10,000 for new apparatus.
Interest account $9,600.
Streets, new and repairs, $15,000.
Water rents, for fire plugs, $9,000.
Hospital, pauper and charities,
$3,500.

Court costs, $10,000. This item anticipates a possible judgment in the suit of Porteous and Patterson against the city on the brick street, and the judgment now in the court of appeals of Mr. Richard Allen for $2,800, rendered in circuit court on account of the location of the pest house.

Home of the Friendless $540.
Bridges and Culverts $6,000.
Post house $100.
Special police officers $300.
City assessor $100.
Tax collector $1,600.
Sanitary $1,000.
Real estate purchases, $2,500.
Celebrations, $500.
Police department $14,000.
City prison $2,500.
Light plant including new machinery, $8,000.

Salaries $7,000.
Oak Grove $1,300.
Sewerage $500.
Schools $35,000.
The tax rate will be fixed at $1.45 on the hundred dollars, one dollar for city purposes, and forty-five cents for school purposes. This is five cents less than last year.

BUSTER SLAYDEN.

NOTORIOUS MAYFIELD NEGRO
ARRESTED NEAR WATER VALLEY.

From Tuesday's Daily.

Buster Slayden, a notorious negro character of Mayfield and vicinity, has at last been arrested for an offense that will probably send him over the road.

He has been in more trouble in the past few years than perhaps any other criminal character in this end of the state. He has been in many fights where pistols were used and has been shot through and through twice while resisting arrest. When tried he always managed to get out of the case without a sentence, and in one case, when he was being tried for resisting an officer, it is said that he scared
all the witnesses away.

He robbed a boy last Saturday near Water Valley school house, near Fulton, and the citizens of Mayfield turned out in a body and captured the man. They brought him in tied securely with ropes and landed him in the Mayfield jail where he will stay until tried.

SURPRISE MARRIAGE

MR. LEE RHODES AND MISS
JOSEPHINE RUPERTUS

Marry in Evansville—They Arrive in Paducah and Are Stopping With the Bride's Sister.

Mr. J. Lee Rhodes, the well known first clerk on the steamer Joe Fowler and Miss Josephine Rupertus, of Elizabeth street, were married at the residence of Mr. Edward Miller, Jr., of Wabash avenue and Virginia street, Evansville, Ind., yesterday afternoon at 2 o'clock by Rev. T. Steele, of Sullivan, Ind. The marriage was a private affair, only a few of the couple's most intimate friends being present.

Miss Rupertus had been visiting in Evansville for the past three months and when the marriage took place nobody suspected that anything was going on otherwise than an every day call. The marriage was kept a secret with the view of surprising their friends, and not even the young lady's mother was informed of the marriage until this afternoon.

Mr. Rhodes is originally from Memphis, Tenn., but had been running on the river for the past 12 years. He is one of the best known and most popular young men on the river, and has many friends in Paducah.

Miss Rupertus is the daughter of the late G. L. Rupertus and is one of Paducah's most attractive young ladies.

The marriage, as intended, will come as a great surprise to their many friends who will wish them
all the success in life possible.

Mr. and Mrs. Rhodes arrived in the city on the Fowler this morning and are at present staying at the residence of her brother-in-law, Mr. Lucien Durrett, of North Seventh street.

They will engage rooms in the city and make Paducah their future home.

MAYOR RETURNS

He Was in the Big Parade at Buffalo Last Monday Morning.

REPRESENTED KENTUCKY

He is Well Pleased With the Fire Apparatus the City Will Soon Add to Its Equipment.

WELL PLEASED WITH YANKEELAND

Mayor Lang returned this morning from his trip east, well pleased with the tour. He left Monday a week ago and got in at 4 o'clock this morning.

The most unusual as well as enjoyable feature of his journey was his appearance at Buffalo in the parade, with Vice President Roosevelt and Senator Mark Hanna. Mayor Lang was sought out at his hotel and given the following card:

"A carriage for the Dedication Day parade will be assigned to you upon the presentation of this ticket at the Easterly, Franklin street, entrance of the city and county hall, Buffalo, May 30th, 1901. You are requested to arrive at the city hall not later than 9:15 a. m., as there necessarily will be some time consumed in locating your carriage.

"The parade will move promptly
at 9:45 a. m.

"Signed, Louis L. Babcock, Marshal."

Mayor Lang was much pleased with the attention shown him, and was the only representative of Kentucky in line.

The fire apparatus he inspected in Providence, R. I., was satisfactory in every respect and will give Paducah a perfect equipment. He brought pictures of the truck and ladder home with him.

"I find," he said to a reporter,
"that Paducah is as well equipped now as many cities, and when she gets the new truck and aerial ladder will be outclassed by none. In the larger cities engines necessarily have to be used on account of the diminution of pressure resulting from the long distances from the standpipes. This gives a city the size of Paducah a great advantage in the matter of protection over or many of the larger cities.

"I saw many pretty streets, but none were more attractive than Broadway from First to Fifth. I saw none of the deep, unsightly gutters, like we have, however, as most of the cities are rolling, and very little artificial drainage is necessary, while Paducah's being so level makes the gutters necessary here."

The mayor spent one day in Louisville on his way east, and there saw the working of the aerial ladder, which can be manipulated by two men.

His trip from first to last was most enjoyable.

Mayor Lang's partner in Buffalo was Dr. P. Uhl, of Ottomaw, Kan., superintendent of the state insane asylum, who represented Kansas.

The mayor was much impressed with Vice President Roosevelt, whom he described as one of the most attractive, athletic looking men he ever saw, and a man who was evidently very popular as he was given an ovation wherever he went.

Gen. Chaffee's Odd Names.

General Chaffee, or maybe he doesn't, in the queer names of Adna Romanza. There is a great deal of speculation as to how he came by romantic cognomens. His people were plain, unromantic farmers in central Ohio, people not usually given to searching for absurd names for their children. However, General Chaffee is so good a soldier that his front

THE WEATHER.

Very Old Turtles.

Six turtles, each weighing from 400 to 450 pounds, and said to be about 250 years old, were recently shipped to Walter Rothschild, M. P., for his private zoological garden in London.
They were captured in the Albermarle islands, South sea. Mr. Rothschild now owns eighty-four tortoises of various ages and sizes. He has been collecting them for years from all over the globe. En route the tortoises received a whole cabbage a day for food.

Found His Double.

Councilman Charles A. Smith of Logansport received a letter evidently intended for some other person of the same name. The stranger was found at the Barnett hotel and proved to be a traveling man from Syracuse, N. Y.
It developed that the two were born in the same town on the same day and that they bore a close personal resemblance to one another.

Grease Against Profanity.

The Washington police are conducting a crusade against profanity. Two men who had been caught were arraigned in the police court recently.
One was fined and the other released on the ground that he yielded to temptation because of the hot weather. In cold weather, he said, he was a total abstainer from profanity.

Tolstoy Lives Like a Peasant.

Although Count Leo Tolstoy is a rich man he still insists on living like a peasant. He has often expressed a desire to give away his fortune, and several of his nine children agree with him, but the Russian law will not permit it without his family's consent.

Tall Man Too Light.

They are mighty particular at West Point and they do some queer things to candidates for admission. One applicant who said he was a lieutenant in the Illinois national guard was rejected the other day because he was too light. He was 6 feet 4 inches in his

Indiana Garnishes Law.

The garnishes law of Indiana provides that in the case of foreign corporations or non-residents, or of persons seeking to leave the state, or to remove their property from it, or to conceal themselves so that a summons would not reach them, the disputed money or notes may be garnished.

Conan Doyle's Critics.

Conan Doyle has rather an original taste in the matter of critics. "I want a boy critic," says he; "the boy who will start a story, and then chuck it down and say 'rot,' or who will read a book straight through and say 'rippling.' That's the person I want to criticize my work."

Regiments Have Regs.

Every German cavalry regiment is now supplied with two boats made of waterproof canvas, which, when not in use, can be folded up. Each boat will carry from six to eight men, and two boats bound together form a raft capable of bearing from twenty-five to twenty-seven hundred-weight.

LOVE WAS VICTOR

BY UNCLE HENRY.

The steadfast friendship of John Edson and Fred Jones was the occasion of frequent remark among the friends who knew them. But many years of their lives were spent together and their devotion was natural.

Edson was a downy easter, of a quiet disposition and steady habits, while Jones was from the sunny south, jovial to a fault and prone to frivolity. They were as unlike in appearance as in disposition, and this added no little to their mutual respect and devotion. They never offered a solution, and perhaps none was possible.

Five years before the incident in their lives here mentioned, Edson and Jones had become residents of a western metropolis and were doing work on a morning paper. As they were wont to do they sought quiet quarters and this threw them into a household where the life and light was a daughter of many charms, the greatest of these being her bright mind and lovely disposition. The two men were not slow to become admirers of this young woman, but Lillie Burnett was as slow as they were to discover the fact. But it was natural, after all, for the young men seemed wedded to their profession and Miss Burnett was just out of her teens and recognized herself as her mother's only support.

Soon, however, the friends found Miss Burnett a topic of much interest to both and frequently the object of attentions susceptible of meaning, while she was free to show both and each that she was glad when their home hours were on; that she was ever all attention when Edson had an incident of his reading to relate, a new book to discuss, though her happiness seemed complete when Jones chatted of more commonplace things—the frivolities of the day, even unto the costumes of the tender sex.

Though such a thing as being in love with Miss Burnett never apparently entered the head of either Edson or Jones, each often thought the other had won and rejoiced without any pang of jealousy, so strong was their friendship. It was not strange, therefore, when each began to make excuses to give the other evenings alone with Miss Burnett and each in turn planned many ways to accomplish this favor, into which both fell easy victims through a mistaken idea as to what they were really doing.

Thus passed matters for some months, the men silently admiring Miss Burnett, until one day Edson, who had persuaded himself he was in his friend's way, concocted a scheme to be called home and hastily departed, but not until after he had told Miss Burnett of a hope he had—that some day Jones would propose to her and be accepted. Edson realized that he was sealing his own bachelorhood and wounding his own heart as well, but his friend was first in his thoughts and he made the sacrifice so calmly and diplomatically that he won a promise for Jones ere Miss Burnett could say nay even by gesture, act or word. Then came the happy day, and before Miss Burnett seemed to realize the fact Edson had told her good-by and was soon gone.

Alone, Miss Burnett's mind was flooded with thoughts. There was a tugging at her heart she could not understand. The idea of love had not possessed her. Edson was to her an ideal gentleman, but his ways were so settled that he appeared oddly. He had won her esteem, she knew, but she had given no serious thought to his attentions. But his absence—his departure—bore heavily upon her and her heart felt as if it would cease beating and tears would come unbidden to her eyes. But did she not have Jones, with his hearty laugh and cheery voice and attractive manners, and had not Edson said he was after her heart and was a noble boy to love, and had not he asked her to encourage him and make him happy for his sake as well as Jones? But it was several hours before she was herself again—before she had arisen from the cozy nook into which she had sunk after Edson had left her. Anyone could have recognized a change had come into her life—her dreams were most seriously changed, and seemingly many days had been added to her life. A thousand thoughts had been scurrying through her mind and she had lived them through, and was now enjoying a calm after a storm.

A new life had been born for Miss Burnett. She had not claimed it, but she knew this she would have to do, for she had well reached the years of discretion and recognized what it all meant. When she arose she lifted up her burden and a new hope. The care of the house had long been the daughter's duty, so unconcernedly she passed from portal to portal to see that all was proper. In performing this duty she was surprised to note that a light was burning brightly in the room which Edson and Jones occupied, and she went in to lower the same. She was impressed with the idea that the room bore evidence of a hasty departure, and in looking about she spied an unfolded letter lying on the table, beside the lamp, on which the ink was not yet dry. Unwittingly she glanced at the writing and discovered that it had been penned by Edson, and this same glance convinced her it had many references as to her, for her name appeared in plain view in many places. Her impulse was to lift up the letter and read it, but honor restrained her, so, closing her eyes, she dimmed the light and turned and walked away. But there was a new revelation in her heart, a new hope in her soul, and she recognized a sacrifice had been made by one who had misjudged her heart because she herself had not known it, until this night. Again there was a flood of thought to disturb Miss Burnett's mind and it was hours before it had spent itself—in fact, the wee' sma' hours were growing longer rapidly when it was over. But she had found the peace sought, had looked into her own heart and read it aright, and had decided upon what was her duty.

Jones had just returned home after his night's work and was letting himself into the house, when the usual light in Mrs. Burnett's room went out; but he gave the matter no thought then, though he did later—when he found and had read and reread the letter left for him by Edson. An hour later, after giving the matter much consideration, Jones said aloud, startling himself in doing so: "That light, this letter. There has been a mistake made and I shall right it. Edson is in love with Miss Burnett, and she reciprocates that love. He has in his fondness for me put me in his place, like a foolish fellow. If there is a sacrifice to be made it shall be mine, not Edson's and Miss Burnett's."

Jones found it difficult to address Miss Burnett the next day. She seemed disposed to avoid him somewhat and was clearly not her old self. He was, therefore, more than satisfied as to his conclusions, but he could think of no way to help him clinch the matter. But he decided to let the opportunity come, as he was sure it would come, and this was the result: The evening when it was thought Edson should signify his intention to start on his return trip, Jones casually remarked that he feared he was seriously thinking of remaining down east. It was a remark he had no authority for making, other than the fact that Edson had not said a word about returning at all, but it was purposely made, for Jones was alone with Miss Burnett, and she was so seated that he could watch her face and detect any effect it might make. The words could not have been more effective, and Jones' conscience smote him, but he was now thoroughly satisfied. He knew that he had lost the treasure that Edson would have given to him at the sacrifice of his heart, but he only aimed to make those he loved happier in a realization of their love for each other in some way to him not then clear.

That night another letter was written beneath that same lamp. But this one was not left unfolded on the table. It was instead folded, wrapped in envelope, addressed and pocketed for mailing the next day. This letter was to John Edson, Esq., Hampton, N. H., and told a plain story of observation and knowledge. It went its way and soon brought an answer. The reply came in a telegram and was briefly:

"Your letter lightens a double burden. Am coming to claim what seems mine through His favor."

The evening of the reception of the dispatch Jones dropped it on a table in front of Miss Burnett and turned away. Half an hour later he had returned and saw in her face a full understanding of the meaning he had wished to leave. That understanding was the assurance that if there was to be any sacrifice made Jones would have to make it and not Edson, and that one and not three would suffer. There was relief to Miss Burnett when she looked into Jones' face and saw an acceptance of the conditions and the smile she gave him was most comforting.

"I shall take my trip home when Edson gets back," said Jones, as if it was all understood.

"But you will not stay long," as calmly remarked Miss Burnett.

"Ah, no," was Jones' reply. And then he coolly answered: I shall be back in time to attend the wedding. You know I must bless you both, which I shall do with all my heart." The first born of John Edson and wife was just old enough to recognize his name of Jones Edson when Jones declared to the proud parents that he could no longer withstand their good example and would soon wed. It was a declaration not expected, for his devotion to a young lady of the neighborhood was known to Mrs. Edson, but there was much in her reply when she said: "You have our best wishes and I congratulate you on your choice."

Gen. Chaffee's Odd Names.

General Chaffee rejoices, or maybe he doesn't, in the queer names of Adia Romanza. There is a great deal of speculation as to how he came by romantic cognomens. His people were plain, unromantic farmers in central Ohio, people not usually given to searching for absurd names for their children. However, General Chaffee is so good a soldier that it doesn't make much difference what his front names are.

Conan Doyle has rather an original

TO ENTER ANNAPOLIS

The first young man from Paducah to enter the naval academy at Annapolis will probably be Mr. Overton Brooks, son of Dr. J. G. Brooks, who has just passed the mental examination required before admittance to the academy. The examination was Friday, and Mr. Brooks passed it successfully, which is a credit to him and would be to any other young man, owing to its being so comprehensive and rigid. A telegram was received from him by his father last evening announcing his success and today he will be subjected to a physical examination, which he will doubtless pass as well as he did the others, as he was assistant instructor in the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium here, and was one of the best athletes in Paducah. His many friends here will be pleased to learn of his deserving success, and to wish him a brilliant career as one of Uncle Sam's cadets. Mr. Brooks has studied hard for the place, and had been in a preparatory school for some time.

That he will do credit to himself and his town goes without saying.

ACCIDENTAL DEATH.

THIS IS THE VERDICT IN THE BUHRLE JENKINS' CASE.

From Monday's Daily.

Coroner Geo. Phelps this morning at Nance's undertaking establishment held the inquest inquiring into the death of Flagman Buhrle Jenkins, who was killed at Hisey Saturday morning. The witnesses could not be found yesterday morning, hence the inquest had to be postponed until today.

The verdict of the jury was that he came to his death by accident. Coroner Phelps says that the proper place for the inquest to have been held was where the death occurred. It seems that the body was picked up and brought here by the railroad company without notifying the coroner of Hopkins county, who should have held the inquest.

MR. JENKINS' FUNERAL.

ONE OF THE LARGEST EVER HELD IN WICKLIFFE.

Mr. J. H. Burnett, Miss Sophie Burnett, and Messrs. Chas. Sugars and Henry Grace, of the city, went to Wickliffe yesterday to attend the funeral of the late Mr. Buhrle Jenkins, of the city, who was killed at Hisey Saturday. The floral offerings were beautiful, and very many, and the funeral was one of the largest ever held in Wickliffe. The burial was at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon.

PAINFUL INJURIES.

POSTMAN JOHN BAYNHAM FELL FROM A TRAIN BETWEEN HICKORY AND MAYFIELD.

From Monday's Daily.
Mr. John Baynham, the well known mail carrier, fell from train No. 121 yesterday afternoon, about 5 o'clock, between Hickory and Mayfield, and was painfully injured. He was found by the track in an unconscious condition at 4:30 and was taken to Mayfield, his original destination. His clothes were torn from his head to his knees and his side and face badly skinned up, and bruised considerably. Mr. Baynham has been a sufferer from rheumatism for the past two weeks and had just recovered sufficiently to be out. He started for Mayfield, his former home, yesterday, and intended to stay out for a short visit.

Mr. Baynham arrived in the city early this morning and is not injured except on the left ear, which is badly cut, and a few scratches and bruises on his body. He said that arrangements had been made to stop and let him off the train at a certain point and as they did not stop he attempted to jump off. He narrowly escaped serious injuries.

SHERIFF SHORT.

CARLISLE'S SHERIFF ORDERED TO GIVE A NEW BOND.

Sheriff F. P. Fisher, of Carlisle county, has been ordered by the county court at Bardwell to give a new bond within the next ten days. It is reported in the Carlisle county News that Sheriff Fisher is short in his accounts, and a representative of the Fidelity and Deposit company, of Baltimore, which is on his bond, arrived last week and after an investigation had its attorney make the motion in county court which resulted in the demand for a new bond. The shortage, according to the sureties, is $8,137.10, but vouchers and credits will reduce this to $5,000. The amount covers the three years he has been in office.

SERIOUSLY WOUNDED.

BOY SHOTS FATHER OF A GIRL HE WAS CALLING ON AT METROPOLIS.

Metropolis, Ill., May 21.—Dennis Reed, an 18-year-old boy, shot and seriously wounded George Williams here. Williams objected to Reed calling on his daughter, and when he found the young man at his house a quarrel arose, which ended in the shooting.

UNIVERSALISTS ELECT OFFICERS.

Hopkinsville, Ky., May 20.—The Universalist State convention was closed with a sermon by the Rev. Dr. Q. A. Shinn, the general missionary of the denomination. Officers for the ensuing year were elected as follows:

President, the Rev. H. C. Beckwith, of Hopkinsville; secretary, Miss Fairleigh Bowlin, of Crofton; treasurer, E. F. Johnson, of White Plains.

The next meeting will be held in Crofton, in October, at which time the handsome church now being erected will be dedicated.

CARNIVAL ROMANCE

There couldn't very well be a carnival without a romance or two. One that is worth telling may yet culminate in a happy marriage.

Several months ago a young man employed in one of the largest mercantile establishments in the city wrote his name and address on a tin bucket that was ready for shipment. In the course of time it was sold in Cairo, Ill., and the young lady naturally saw the name, and being of a romantic turn of mind, wrote to the young man.

He replied and they exchanged several letters. She sent her photograph, but the young man soon afterwards lost her address, and had about forgotten the incident.

The other morning during the rush for carnival accommodations, two young ladies applied for board at the same place the young man makes his home. The young man thought there was something familiar about the face of one of them and finally remembered that she was the image of the photograph of the young woman who had written him. He searched until he found the photograph and taking it down stairs, presented it to her.

She admitted it was her own picture and asked where he got it, and when he explained, she was very much surprised to learn that he was the same young man she had written to. The acquaintance was renewed, and during the carnival week perhaps developed a feeling more tender than friendship.

The young lady has now returned home, but it is hinted that she may shortly return to Paducah to live.

NEW STAMPS.

THERE ARE FEW CALLS FOR THEM AT THE LOCAL POSTOFFICE.

The supply of Pan-American souvenir postage stamps on sale at the post-office here has not yet been exhausted, and there are few calls for them. As they are not given out unless called for, and few people seem to know that they are to be had, it is uncertain when they will attain any degree of popularity. The stamps, however, are extremely artistic, and a set of them is well worth having as souvenirs.

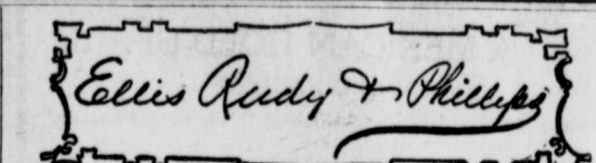

The one-cent stamp is a green ground handsomely engraved, with a lake steamer in the center; the two-cent is red, with the picture of a fast express train in black; the four-cent stamp is light brown with the picture of an automobile; the five-cent stamp is blue with a picture of a suspension bridge at Niagara; the eight-cent stamp is dark brown, showing the picture of a canal with canal boats, and the ten-cent stamp is a terra cotta, with the picture of an ocean liner. The collection is a very pretty one, furnishing as it does representations of various modes of travel.

The borders take up the colors of the regular series of the same denomination now in use. The words "commemorative series, 1901" and "United States of America" next below appear above the vignette; the legend in a line next below the central opening, with the denomination in a line at the bottom appears in the same order on all stamps of the series. All the lettering is in white Roman capitals. The central illustrations are from photographs.

Gen. Chaffee's Odd Names.

General Chaffee rejoices, or maybe he doesn't, in the queer names of Adna Romanza. There is a great deal of speculation as to how he came by romantic cognomen. His people were plain, unromantic farmers in central Ohio, people not usually given to searching for absurd names for their children. However, General Chaffee is so good a soldier that it doesn't make much difference what his front names are.

Ghass Mukhtar Pasha, Ottoman High Commissioner in Egypt, has made a report to the Porte calling its attention to serious evils in the internal administration of the Ottoman empire and urging various reforms, including liberty of the press, appointment to offices by merit, the creation of a council of notables with control of the finances, independent tribunals, and the abolition of the palace veto on the decisions of the council of ministers.

Very Old Turtles.
Six turtles, each weighing from 400 to 450 pounds, and said to be about 250 years old, were recently shipped to Walter Rothschild, M. P., for his private zoological garden in London. They were captured in the Alhermarie islands, South sea. Mr. Rothschild now owns eighty-four tortoises of various ages and sizes. He has been collecting them for years from all over the globe. En route the tortoises received a whole cabbage a day for food.

Found His Double.
Councilman Charles A. Smith of Loganport received a letter evidently intended for some other person of the same name. The stranger was found at the Harrett hotel and proved to be a traveling man from Syracuse, N. Y. It developed that the two were born in the same town on the same day and that they bore a close personal resemblance to one another.

A MEXICAN HOLD-UP.

BY OLD PADUKE.

Author of "The Liars' Duel," "Farleigh," "Should She Explain."

The stage from Trevino on the Mexican International R. R. to Monterey, on the Mexican National R. R., started for Monterey at 1 p.m. It was now 10 o'clock a.m. and the down train had just arrived at Trevino. The passengers who got off to take the stage route were a boy tourist and four German merchants. The day before the guard had given up his task and for the first time for weeks the stage was without protection. It was no use, as long as a guard rode with the coach no Domingues appeared. Trap them they could not, and fight them they would not, so the stage company gave notice that if a load of passengers could not protect themselves from two men then they would have to submit, as the company had done all they could be expected to do. It was stated that no more guards would make the trip except to protect valuable express matter.

This was the first time out and each one took his own risk. When this was known the passengers had a talk and concluded to ride, as the next train was 12 hours off and the stage short cut saved several hundred miles by rail to those who wanted to get back to the "States."

They would be due at Monterey at 6 p.m. and the north bound train left an hour later. After it was decided to run the gauntlet there was an examining of weapons. Among the travelers were produced three revolvers, and the boy had a 22 pearl-handled toy that he carried in his upper vest pocket. The rest of his outfit consisted of a roll of clothing in a blanket with a shawl-strap around it and a leather fishing rod case, with jointed rod, flies, lines, etc. At the other end he raised a little flap and pulled out some paper-backed novels. His entire unconsciousness of impending danger made the rest of the party feel sorry for him. His chalky white face, little deer of a mustache, light fringe of soft curls under a pith helmet, and calm, unconcerned grey eyes be speke the Mama's boy out seeing the world before going into business. The driver spoke up and voicing the sentiments of the crowd advised him not to go. "Why not?" the boy asked meekly. "Well, I just see you in the hands of them Domingues. I guess they would eat you for their supper," replied the driver, with a wink at the other four travelers. "Oh, I reckon not; not as long as I have this,"—and he patted the little 22-caliber. "Oh, Wow! Did you hear that?" snapped the manipulator of the reins. "Let me tell you something, sonny. Now if you was to shoot me with that thing and I found it out I might slap you, see?" and he laughed uproariously at his own sally.

"No, I don't see," replied the artless one. "I believe I'll try if I can buy any curios in this town to take home to mother," and he marched off down the street with a manly swing.

"Well, gentlemen, what do you think of that?" demanded the Jehu, "and his ticket calls for a seat by the driver. If he falls off I can't help it, as I can't drive four horses and take care of a child at the same time."

In about an hour the boy came back to the office with his arms full of packages which he laid on the ground before the travelers. Then he got out his fishing combination, pulled out the sections of the rod, jointed them again and made imaginary casts. Then packed up everything, scratched himself, got up, sat down, asked questions, wanted to start on the trip right away and made himself a general nuisance. The contempt of the driver was ill concealed, but at last the time arrived, the horses hitched, the last instruction given, and the youth climbed up beside the driver with his case. A crack of the whip and they were off on the cross-country ride to Monterey, a long, dusty, up and down road with its beggars, naked children, mud houses, cactus and grassy plains for scenery. When the journey was well under way the boy opened up with:

"Say, driver—"

"Don't call me driver; my name's Waddell, Sam Waddell."

"Well, Mr. Waddell—"

"Now, not Mister nothing, just Waddell."

"Well, 'Waddell,' I heard a man at the office say that if he was the driver he would not take that dude along unless he pulled a 'red order' on him. What's a 'red order'?"

"The man was about right. A red order from the company reads like this: 'Obey the hearer or lose your job.'"

"Isn't a ticket the same thing?"

"Now, it ain't the same thing."

"After a half hour or more of silence the boy broke out again with:

"Say Waddell, that's an awful hard-up town, that Trevino."

"Why?" replied Sam curtly.

"Because when I bought them things I went all over the town trying to get a $50 bill changed, and I had to give up buying because no one could change it."

"You don't mean to tell me, you double dam fool! That $50 bill will bring them Domingues down on us sure. So you've got money, have you, and you showed it to them Greasers? Je Moses! I am almost a mind to put you down ten miles from Monterey and make you foot it, that is, if we ain't stopped."

Sam mused awhile and made grimaces of disgust, then he resumed: "That settles it; don't say another word to me or I will lose my temper and slap you off this seat, and you will be run over and you won't see your Ma any more. Well, I'll be damned!"

Another silence followed, then the youth thought he would like to take a shot at a rabbit and announced his intention. He felt in his pocket for his 22,—it was gone!

"Picked your pocket and stole your gun; boys ought not to have guns any way," put in the irritated Waddell.

The boy seemed crushed by this misfortune and the avalanche of contumely heaped upon him, and spoke no more but amused himself looking about the country with his field glass. Shortly after changing horses at the half way house and when well under way, he became deeply interested and fixed his glass persistently in one direction. The driver's curiosity was too much for him.

"What do you see?" he condescended to ask.

"Oh, I can talk, can P. Well, it seems to be a circus or something, two men 'loping across the plain aiming just ahead. Both have blue cloaks on, big high hats and knee breeches, and the tails and manes of their horses are tied full of different colored ribbons."

"Domingues! I just knew some of their spies saw your money and they have been warned that a good thing is coming. I'll bet signals have been flying from every high point on the route all the afternoon." He pulled his horses up to a walk and called down to the drummers.

"Domingues just ahead! Get out your guns. It's four against two—I don't count the boy. Now show your hand. As for me, they don't want anything I've got and I am not going to get hurt if I can help it, and I give you fair warning to ask."

He sat up suddenly and began to drive. "I'll say one thing for them Doms, you can agree with me that they give a fellow a show for his money with all those clothes and ribbons," continued Sam with a grim smile at his untimely joke.

"Where do you think they will stop us?" the boy questioned.

"You don't seem to be scared much."

"Me? No! This is fun and an experience I can tell about when I grow up. Where will they stop us?"

"About a mile ahead, as we run down this long slope and go up the next one. The horses will about be in a walk and then they will have you, and I am glad of it. Fun is it?"

When half way down the long slope the youngest fumbled in his pocket, pulled out a piece of paper and touched the driver.

"You know what this is?" he asked calmly.

"Dain if it ain't a red order!" exclaimed Sam in blank astonishment.

"Well, I'm McDonald the Wells-Fargo messenger," he went on quietly, "got here for these fellows benefit. We have got 'em dead to rights. That money showing did the trick, they are here and it is my business to wing 'em both."

"Why didn't you tell me long ago?" said Waddell with a hurt expression.

"Because I don't take chances with anybody in my plans. How do I know you are not in with them? Your stage has been robbed more than any other two in this section, so don't do anything suspicious for there are guns sticking out all over me and eyes in the back of my head. Your talk to those inside shows why it is so easy to stop you."

After giving this little lecture he resumed: "And now you do exactly what I tell you, understand?"

"That I will, you are a good one."

Then in an undertone, "Fooled me, smart Sam Waddell, and I poked fun at him and joshed him. Sam, you are a two-spot," with much disgust to himself.

"What's the drummers doing?" says Waddell, after catching his breath.

McDonald glanced below and laughed softly. "They are all lying flat on the floor of the stage; they are so white I expect they are senseless; they can't be used to riding over rough roads."

"Aint you going to make them help you?"

"No, I want them to stay just where they are."

"Where's your gun?"

"Right here in this yellow case. It is a double-barreled, sawed-off shotgun, loaded with buckshot. Pulling them fishing rods in and out of the barrels was only a blind for you, old man."

"What do you want me to do? I am starting up the slope directly."

"Drive your horses in a walk up the grade. When you get near the top start them in a gallop, and as you go over drive them for all they are worth. The Doms will call to you to stop, but make out you can't hold your horses and keep them going. I'll tend to the rest."

"All right," said Waddell, settling himself and taking a firm grip on the reins.

Down grade easy, up in a walk, then the whip and over the crest in a run. On each side of the road was a picturesque Domingues. Each held a repeating rifle—one leveled at the driver's seat, the other on the empty stage windows. "Stop! Halt!" commanded the spokesman.

"Can't hold 'em," he shouted. In answer to Sam's halloo the horses rushed forward.

"Stop, I tell you," yelled the Mexicans, as they raced beside the coach.

"Can't hold 'em, I told you."

All this time the youth clutched his yellow case across his knees, a picture of abject terror. The desperadoes smiled. This hold-up was easy, no trouble from the boy, Sam with his hands full and the inside passengers out of sight.

"If you don't stop 'em we are going to throw the leader, called out the elder Dom to the driver."

Sam made no reply, but apparently labored in vain to control his horses.

"Throw the leader, Francesco," came the order.

Francesco sped forward, unbound his lariat and swung the long loop around his head ere he threw to catch the feet of the foremost plunging horse. The elder brother took his eyes off the boy and driver momentarily and the force was over. Quick and as unexpected as lightning from a clear sky, the yellow case went up—a flash and report, then the right barrel was turned across the now terrified horses backs and Francesco stopped, his hand riddled with buckshot.

McDonald threw out the empty shells, slipped in loaded ones and was ready, but it was not necessary.

Back in the road was the elder Domingues, dragging himself into the bushes, while his horse, full of shot, mad with pain, squealing, kicking and buckjumping across the country, his ribbons flying fantastically, his highly decorated saddle upside down.

In front was Francesco, rocking in his saddle, his horse jumping from side to side, till, with a plunge, he threw his rider heavily and started across the plain to join his companion in beribboned revelry.

"Shall we go back and get those two fellows, Mr. McDonald?" asked Sam, demurely.

"No, they will be sick a long time after this. It's my business to get back to the States before the news of this gets out." Then looking toward the still rearing stage horses, "I am mighty sorry I put some shot in the ears of those leaders. You won't have to use the whip any more."

"No, I don't believe I can hold them this time for sure," grinned Sam.

McDonald looked down into the stage through the peep-hole. The traveling men had not moved, all were white as paper. One of them glanced up, noticed the stage was still moving, saw the smiling face of the boy, and passed the good word that danger was over.

Instantly they were up and ready for war, but it was too late; they were not needed.

By the time the horses were checked up they were within a mile of the limits of Monterey. Shortly the horses were brought to a standstill, sweating and trembling.

McDonald jumped to the ground make at $55. 10m1f quickly and ran to the door of the stage. "Stop, gentlemen, don't get out. I want to ask a favor of you. I am the Wells-Fargo messenger and I think I have settled both the Domingues. Now I warn you not to say a word about this and take the train for the States as soon as the Lodi will let you. If you but your eye or give a hint these Mexicans will throw you all into jail as witnesses and bring all kinds of criminal proceedings against us. You may be in jail twelve months before getting a hearing, and after you get out it means assassination at the hands of these men's relatives. If you should begin to kill them they would keep coming to the third and fourth generations, and when the men give out the women will start after you. If you want to do business in Mexico, don't say anything now or hereafter. Give me your word of honor you won't talk."

"We promise on honor. It is as much for our safety as yours."

"All right, let us be good every-day passengers."

Going back to the driver he swung himself to the seat and the stage started for town.

"Walk your horses," he commanded, "we don't want to get to the railroad station before train time. When the Domingues clan comes after you, you can show them your horses' ears full of holes, your cut hands, and by the folks in Trevino you can prove that you did not know anything at all about the dude being a guard."

"I can swear to that," answered Sam much crestfallen. "As to the rest leave it to me, I believe I can see my way out. That was a mighty neat piece of work. Nobody ever pulled down two finer birds with the right and left barrels."

At 7 p.m. five travelers climbed aboard the north-bound train in the most matter of fact manner. Half an hour after the train was on its way the boy had disappeared, and a firm-faced, grey-eyed man of thirty, wearing a fedora hat, had taken his place. The curls and mustache were in his pocket, water had washed away the chalky make-up from his face and the black from his eyebrows.

By next morning they had passed through Laredo and were safe in Texas. A few days later McDonald received the following letter:

FLAGMAN KILLED

Mr. T. Buhle Jenkins, a Well Known
Young Man, Meets
Death.

[From Saturday's Daily.]

Mr. T. Buhle Jenkins, a flagman on the Illinois Central and a resident of this city, was killed at Hales, a station just this side of Central City, at 12:55 this morning while attempting to get into the front end of the caboose of extra train No. 22, north bound.

There were no witnesses to the accident, but it is thought that he met his death in trying to board his train. When the train had been side tracked and the main line cleared it was discovered that Mr. Jenkins was missing and Conductor Pink then went in search for the missing flagman and found his dead body some distance from the track at the above mentioned station. He was badly mangled, his right hand and left leg having been cut off and his head crushed.

The deceased had been on the Illinois Central only about six weeks and had never drawn his pay since employed on this division. He at one time worked on the northern division as fireman, but since his residence in Paducah, had been employed as a clerk in the Ellis, Rudy & Phillips dry goods department, until he went out as flagman. He left Paducah at 8 o'clock last night.

He was born in Blandville and was 23 years of age. He leaves besides a stepfather, Bud Reeves, and mother, of Wickliffe, two sisters, Mrs. Dr. Ed Shelton and Mrs. Pearl Perkins, both of Blandville, and a brother, Mr. Will Jenkins, of Blandville. Mrs. Hugh Perkins is in the city now at the home of her uncle, Mr. J. H. Barnett, 315 North Fifth street, at whose house the deceased made his home. The deceased had been in the city three years and in that time had made numerous friends who were deeply grieved to learn of his death. The body was brought to this city this morning at 4 o'clock and taken to the M. Nance undertaking establishment.

General Chaffee, who may be of speculation as to how he came by ro-

SELF DEFENSE

Mr. John L. Jones, the Furniture Dealer, Exonerated.

HAD TO SHOOT KEANE

The Dead Man Had Attempted to Draw His Pistol But the Hammer Caught In His Pocket.

KEANE HAD ASSAULTED HIS OWN WIFE

[From Tuesday's Daily.]

The account of the killing at Evansville yesterday morning of Thomas Keane, a plumber, by John L. Jones, the furniture dealer whose local establishment is at Third and Court, shows that Mr. Jones acted in self-defense, and is now doubtless enjoying his liberty again.

Mrs. Virginia Keane, the dead man's wife, is a bookkeeper at Jones', and she and her husband separated a year ago, and he went to Terre Haute and Washington, Ind., to work. She claims that he squandered his money and her's, and in addition to mistreating her, failed to support her.

Sunday he returned to Evansville for the first time in a year, and went to see his wife, trying to get her to pay off a five hundred dollar mortgage on some property, and also to live with him, which she declined to do.

He met Mr. Jones on the street and attempted to pick a quarrel with him, drawing a pistol and threatening to use it, but Mr. Jones declined to have anything to do with him and left. He afterwards heard threats made by Keane, and at the advice of friends armed himself.

Yesterday morning Keane went to Jones' store and walking to the desk at which his wife was working, accused her of being unfaithful to him, and struck at her. She warned off the blow and Mr. Jones told him that no trouble would be permitted in his store and that if he wanted to create any disturbance he would have to go outside.

Keane declared that he would not go outside, and when Mr. Jones threatened to put him out, attempted to draw his pistol.

The hammer caught in his pocket and Mr. Jones proved the quicker and shot him twice in the breast, one bullet passing through his heart. He fell and expired in a few moments. Mrs. Keane witnessed the shooting and bore the ordeal well. A young man who happened to be present also saw the shooting and all bear Mr. Jones out in his claim that the killing was in self-defense.

Immediately after the tragedy he telephoned the police that he was ready to give himself up, and was taken into custody to await the action of the coroner's jury.

Keane's parents live in Cairo and his father is said to be worth about $15,000, but his son's conduct became such that he would no longer render him any financial assistance to help him in his downward career.

An investigation of the dead man's finances showed that he had thirty-five dollars in cash and a credit of $300 in the Washington, Ind., bank.

Mr. Jones, who left Paducah Saturday for Evansville, is well known here, and was always considered a quiet, peaceable man. He is small, dark complexioned and partially bald, and apparently about 40 years of age. He has had a branch store here and at Mayfield for several years past.

TOO LATE.

A BOARDING HOUSE KEEPER REPORTS A GANG OF PICKPOCKETS.

A whole house full of pickpockets have just been reported, but too late for any steps to be taken towards capturing the thieves. The landlady at a Third street boarding house rented a room to four young men, last Monday, for the week. They would go out in the morning and would not return until early the next morning and the whole time they were in her house she said they had never gotten in earlier than 2 o'clock in the morning. The room they occupied was kept locked by them in the day and she became suspicious and investigated after she had found that when they returned in the morning they would count and divide money among themselves. While they were out Friday she gained access to their room and went on a tour of investigation finding nothing suspicious until she attempted to open the dresser drawers. They were locked but she got a key and unlocked the top drawer and found over a dozen pocketbooks both old and new.

She then knew the men were pickpockets but would not report the matter to the police until they had left the city, as she said she was afraid she would be murdered for telling. The roomers waited their time extended until yesterday, but she would not let them stay, and immediately after their departure she reported the matter, but too late to catch the guilty parties.

FOR ROBBERY

[From Tuesday's Daily.]

Will Baker, a stone cutter, his wife Annie, and Pearl Bass, a 16-year-old girl, were arrested last night by Captain Bailey and Officers Rasor and Dugan, on a charge of robbery. They are alleged to have robbed Thomas Farless, of Graves county, who often comes to the city and enjoys a spree of greater or less dimensions, of $34 last Friday night.

The family reside on North Tenth street, and Farless claims he went there Friday and was in the room when someone knocked on the door, and a man claiming to be the woman's husband entered and drew a razor on him, demanding his money. Farless had the $34 in his sock, but he declined to produce until the woman, who seems to have hatched the scheme for the robbery, threatened him with a pistol.

He then gave up the money, and it was sometime before the police could get any definite clue to the perpetrators of the alleged robbery. The girl seems to have been implicated in it, and if Farless' story is true, the home of the Bakers was a veritable den where unfortunate like Farless were systematically lured for the purpose of robbery.

The cases were called this morning in Judge Sanders' court and Attorney Gilbert appointed to defend. The trial is set for Thursday.

TOBACCO MARKET.

FEWER OFFERINGS THIS WEEK THAN LAST.

The tobacco market will be a little easy on offerings this week, it is thought.

The local dealers have fewer offerings this week than last and the market was easy last week.

"Tobacco is an article that is hard to see into," said a well known tobacco dealer, "and you can not make any statements whatever relative to the standing of the market until the sales are all over."

There will be two sales this week and the final report will not be ready for publication until Friday.

CHORUS GIRLS MAKE FORTUNES ON 'CHANGE.

Recent Wave of Mad Speculation Enables Three Footlight Beauties to Retire.

Here are three of New York's chorus girls who have made fortunes by recent stock speculation and have, as a consequence, retired from the stage. Miss Walker has realized $100,000 from recent investments. Miss Texwith followed suit with a modest $50,000, while Miss Drake is satisfied with $10,000. All three girls are well known in New York theatrical circles.

PASSED BOTH.

MR. OVERTON BROOKS HAS NO TROUBLE IN GETTING INTO ANNAPOLIS.

Dr. J. G. Brooks last evening received a telegram announcing that his son, Mr. Overton Brooks, who passed the mental examination to the Annapolis academy, has also passed successfully the physical examination, and will straightway enter the academy. This will be good news, but no surprise, to the young man's many friends here.

YOUNG FATHER'S FEELINGS.

Emotions That Overcome Him Are Experienced by One. When the average novel writer wishes to describe a set of emotions for which he has no appropriate name, he usually refers to them as being "mingled," and this, perhaps, better than anything else, reflects the condition of a man when he first becomes a father. Coupled with the feeling of intense pride that comes to you as one of the "intermediate parties" in such a momentous event, is the kindred feeling of utter insignificance you also have, which acts as an antidote. After being ordered out of the room by the doctor and the trained nurse you wander aimlessly down a side street, although you cannot for the life of you tell what there is to be ashamed of, and as you approach your office you grow more and more uneasy. And yet, while there is guilt written all over your face there wells up in your heart a veritable fountain of intense egotism, which is immediately on tap to the first moment of confidence. You assume a careless, devil-may-care air, and carry your indifference to the point of intensity. And then in response to inquiries—for your face itself is a story—your announcement, as if it happened daily like the weather report and the time table, that it is a boy or a girl as the case may be. Thus, you run the gantlet, and, finding that the world still moves and breathes and everybody is inclined to settle down, you watch your chance and get the first unmarried man you can find to consent to listen to you. You pour into his sympathetic ear the whole story. You tell him how much the baby weighs, what it looks like, how you felt and how you feel. You describe your aspirations for that child, talk about love and duty and education and training, order a small bottle, supplement it with another, get more confidential and finally leave him, with a sense of your own intense importance which only another interview with the doctor and the trained nurse and the baby—can wipe out. But all things have an end. At the end of a month, while you are at your desk in profit and loss, someone comes in, slaps you on the back and exclaims: "Well, old man, how's the baby?" And you reply absently: "Oh, he's all right!"—Life.

TRIAL FRIDAY.

MR. JOHN L. JONES OUT ON A $3,000 BOND.

The preliminary trial of Mr. John L. Jones, who killed Thomas Keane at Evansville, will be held Friday morning. His attorneys wanted to have an early hearing, but the state claimed they would not be ready until Friday, and Judge Curry set that as the time for hearing the evidence in the case.

Mr. Jones is out on a $3,000 bond pending the preliminary hearing.

IT IS CALLED A TWIST.

Twentieth Century Method of Holding a Frock on the Streets. The present fashion in which the women hold their skirts off the pavements is known as "the twentieth century twist," and it is described by a masculine observer as looking as if the females were afraid their skirts would get away from them. This is not a particularly elegant portrayal, and yet it, in a manner, conveys an idea of the frantic clutch at their garments which women now affect. The old method of lifting the frock by holding it directly in the middle of the back and pulling it upward has gone to fashion's pasture. Nowadays the folds are gathered in the left hand and are drawn closely all the way across the back to the left side, where they are held high. It is a thorough enough way. Not an inch of the material is left to sweep the ground, but it hampers the movements and is impracticable. Who, one wonders, acts the fashion for holding skirts anyway? And does she practice it in front of a mirror before thrusting a new method upon a breathless feminine world? In the case of the twentieth century twist, surely a mirror could not have been among the furniture, for no woman who saw herself as others see her would ever patronize this style, it has too many disadvantages and too little to recommend it. For a space it was believed that with the spring would vanish all reason for "dress lifts"—to coin a phrase—of any sort. But, alas, the spring tailor gowns are all provided with "dips"—hateful word—and we are to go through this hot weather as through last, it seems, bearing our burden more or less easily as we are more or less ungraceful and inelegant.—Chicago Chronicle.

Steam Cartridge for Blasting.

Great interest is being manifested in mining circles in Germany in the new method of blasting by means of steam cartridges. The cartridge, into which is soldered a platinum wire, is filled with water and placed in the boring. The wire is then connected with a powerful electric dynamo. When the current is turned on steam is generated and raised to a pressure of ten atmospheres, rending the rock in all directions. The method obviates all chance of accidents from explosion.

Hunted Feline Controls Tigers.

"When all other methods of controlling wild beasts fail, the keeper has only to employ an iron rod which has been made red-hot at one end," says an old circus man. Lions and tigers will cringe before the heated poker, and no matter how restless and fractious they may have been, the sight of the glowing iron immediately brings them to their best of animal senses."

CARPENTERS' UNION.

ORGANIZER SIMON IS DOING GOOD WORK AT MAYFIELD.

National Organizer Sam Simon has returned from Mayfield, where he installed a carpenter's union, with 46 charter members, last night and also laid the foundation of two other unions. This is the first nearby town that the organizers have begun to organize and when the work is completed another town will be taken up and worked until all the nearby towns are well represented by labor unions. The carpenters' union was installed into Union No. 811.

And yet, when all is thought and said, The heart still overrules the head. Still what we hope, we must believe, And what is given we receive.

Must still believe, for still we hope That, in the world of larger scope, What here is faithfully begun, Will be completed, not undone.

My child, we still must think when we That simpler life together we, Some true result will yet appear Of what we are, together here.—Arthur Hugh Clough.

He lived forty-nine years in the United States.—James Gordon in Chicago Record.
